And so, methought, 'twill quickly be With every mark on earth of me; A wave of dark oblivion's sea Will sweep across the place Where I have trod the sandy shore Of time, and been to be no more-Of me, my day, the name I bore, To leave no track or trace.

And yet, with Him who counts the sands, And holds the water in His hands, I know a lasting record stands Inscribed against my name,
Of all this mortal part has wrought,
Of all this waking soul has thought,
And from these fleeting moments caught
For glory or for shame.

Bill Arp Moralizes on Men and Matters.

The good book says, "The Lord hath set one thing over against another."—
There seems to be a law of compensation that balances everything in nature and keeps the terrestrial ball a rolling; not only the ball, but everything that is on it. Man may jump up like a hopper-grass, but he has to jump down again. There is a cure for every excess, a set off for every offset. Every bile has to burst, and every bubble, too. Seasons may come and go, and drouths and floods, and caterpillars and cotton worms and potato bugs, but the average is all the same, and the Scripture is fulfilled which says that seed time and harvest shall not fail. Well, of course it don't mean that fail. Well, of course it don't mean that the farmer shall make as good crop one year as another, but he had the time to do it, and if he failed he tried all the harder next year and perhaps made up what he lost. The account is kept balanced someway and what is lost is gained if a man works for it in the right way. There is many a blessing in disguise. When a big fire sweeps away a block it is built up better the next time. When is built up better the next time. When pestilence comes everybody goes to clean-ing up. Riches have their curse like poverty its pleasures. Generations play at see saw, up to day and down to mor-row. Bankers and merchant princes break and great men die, but nobody stops to mourn or pity. The busy world looks for a moment at the vacant place and says "close up! close up!" and we mourn and pity on the run. I was ruminating over your varigated paper what a world of news every day of accident and incident, of ups and downs, of fire and flood, and failures, and deaths, and marriages, and miseries, and murders, and how it would all foot up in a year's cal-endar. I was thinking about the railroad chess-board that the magnates are playing on, and how first one and another says "check" and they keep on losing a pawn or a piece, but nobody is mated as yet and I hope never will be, for the balance must be kept even for the people's good, and be kept even some way or another, for it never was intended that money kings shall converse the people. money kings shall oppress the people or overthrow them.

THE SOVEREIGN PEOPLE. I was thinking how easy it would be for Jay Gould and Vanderbilt and Victor Newcombe and a few others to combine and control all the cotton or corn or wheat in the land and make beggars of the nation if they dared to, and then I thought of the forces that kept them from it, for they know how far to go, and they know the people wouldn't stand it. The people are at last the sovereigns, the kings of the earth, and they are becoming more so as the years roll on. They allow kings and emperors like they use to, but that divinity which doth hedge about a king is gone. He holds the office and And that is for her to dress in ging-ham.—From an Essay in Erskine Student.

POPPING THE QUESTION.—Constitutionally timid men might, if necessary, resort to some such expedient as that of the youth whoes bashfulness would not admit of his proposing directly to the object of his affections, but who at length summoned up sufficient courage to lift the young lady's cat and say: "Pussy, may I have your mistress?" To which the young lady very naturally and cleverly responvoice of the people is generally the voice of God. In the multitude of counsel there is safety, and most every man is a counsellor now. Whatever is, is right, whether it seems wrong or not. The war was right, and our defeat was right.blavery was right, for it was ordained for the good of the negro, and freedom was right, for the time had come when it was a curse to the white man. Everything a curse to the white man. Everything moves on according to a plan, a providence. We remember that years ago the farmers wore out their lands and moved westward. This peopled a new territory and gave the old lands rest. They grew up again in forest and have been peopled and cleared again. We remember when the bermuda grass was considered a curse in middle Georgia, but now it is a blessing and is diligently cultivated. Time and experiment is working wonders. The people are rubbing against each other, and what one man learns is soon caught and absorbed by his watchful nabors. Fixed laws of justice and morals and business are prevailing all over the land.

PUBLIC OPINION. Public opinion is getting to be the supreme law and governs everything. Public opinion says one wife is enough and so Mormonism must go. When railroads combine against the people the people rise up and make a commission to regulate and control them. Jay Gould may combine with Newcombe and Wadley or any other man. They may hall or may combine with Newcombe and Wadley or any other men. They may bull or bear the stock, but the people will control the roads. The people are long suffering and bear a great deal, but when they become desperate they speak in thunder tones. Stock-brokers and speculators make a power of noise and fuss, but they don't hurt anybody but themselves. They are just like a passel of gamblers round a gaming table. They bet high and lose and win, but the spectators are only amused and entertained. It is the surplus cash that is at stake. It's not my money or yours, nor our farms or capital in business. We don't care whether the Louisville and Nashville stock is one hundred or two hundred, so it carries us and our freight at reasonable prices. If a man has stock in it and it It is the surplus each that is at stake. It's not my money or yours, nor our farms or capital in business. We don't care whether the Louisville and Ngshville stock is one hundred or two hundred, so it carries us and our freight at reasonable prices. If a man has stock in it and it pays fair dividends let him keep it, whether it is up or down, and if it don't let him sell and put his money in something else. Stock gambling suits some folks and so let 'em gamble on. Money made in that way don't amount to anything. If the possessor does not lose it his children will spend it and leave the world as poor as their father came into it. A fortune made in a year rarely sticks to anybody. Five years is hazardous; but one gained by the pursuit of an honest calling for ten or twenty years brings with it that high reward which justly entitles a man to be classed with the true aristocracy.

No man ought to desire a fortune to come suddenly. It would embarrass him. It takes several years to learn its best uses and to handle it with becoming dignity. I can tell 'em as they walk the streets, there is a begring of dignity. the streets—there is a bearing of dignity and moral worth about 'em. I give 'em the side-walk, I do, for I have regard for them. They control money and they control men. Thousands are dependent them. They control money and they control money and they control men. Thousands are dependent upon their capacity and integrity, and they know it, and feel it, and it makes 'em both proud and hamble. I think I would like to be a president of a bank, wouldn't you? Bashfulness on the part of lovers, and want of courage in connection with popping the momentous question, have formed the subject of many a stary. Here is one. mentous question, have formed the subject of many a story. Here is one: A gentleman had long been paying attention to a young lady whom he was very auxious to marry, but to whom he had never ventured to declare his passion. When opportunity offered his courage deserted him, and when he was resolved to speak the fair one never could be found alone or disengaged. Driven to desperation, he one day succeded in accomplishing his purpose in a somewhat remarkable manpurpose in a somewhat remarkable man-ner at a dinner party. To most people a dinner party would hardly seem the most suitable occasion for overtures of this dedinner party would hardly seem the most suitable occasion for overtures of this description, especially when, as in this instance, the lady is scated at the opposite side of the table from her admirer. The latter, however, was equal to the occasion. Tearing a leaf from his pocketbook, he wrote on it, under cover of the table: "Will you be my wife? Write yes or no at the foot of this." Calling a servant, he asked him in a whisper to take the slip—which, of course, was carefully f...ded and directed—to "the lady in blue, opposite." The servant did as requested; and the gentleman, in an agony of suspence, watched him give it to the lady, and fixed his eyes, with badly disguised eagerness, to try and judge from her expression how the quaintly made offer was received. He had forgotten one thing—namely, that ladies seldom carry pencils so ut them at a dinner party. The beloved one was, however, not to be baffled by so trifling an obstacle. After reading the note calmly, she turned to the servant and said: "Tell the gentleman yes." They were married in due course.

prominent church members were having a business meeting in the basement ships and telegraph lines, and do big things that other men couldent do. Rich men are a blessing to the land, for if all the money in the world was equally divided among all the people, none of us would have any to spare, and there wouldent be another railroad or steamboat built in the next fifty years; so its all right I reckon, and I'm content and I wish everybody else was. I've had more than my share all my life. I've cat as much good vittels and wore as warm clothes as a millionaire. After man came woman.

And she has been after him ever since. It costs more to keep a woman than three dogs and a shot way.

As though it had escaped; but he made no state of the church to devise ways and means to pay for the pulpit furniture. The question of an oyster party had peen decided, and they got to talking about oysters, and one old deaconess asked a deaction of an oyster party had peen decided, and they got to talking about oysters, and one old deaconess asked a deacton if he didn't think raw oysters would go further, but they wouldn't be satisfying; and then he went on to tell how far a raw oyster went once with him. He said he was at a large dinner party with a lady on each side of him, and he was trying to talk to both of them, or carry on two different subjects at the same time. They had some oysters, and he took one up on a fork, a large fat one, and was about to put it in his mouth, when the lady on his left called his attention, and when the cold fork struck his teeth, and no oyster on it, he felt as though it had escaped; but he made no sign. If we went on talking with the lady on the lady of the pulpit furniture. The died, and they got to talking about oysters, and one old deacone as though nothing had happened. He sat strong nothing had happened. He glanced down at his shirt bosom, and was at once on the trail of the oyster, though the insect had got about two minutes the start of him. It had gone down bis waist-coat, under the waistband of his trousers, and he was powerless to arrest its progress. The oyster, he observed, had very cold feet and the more he tried to be calm and collected, and to be a the tried to the calm and collected. keep the track of the conversation, the more the oyster seemed to walk around. He says he does not know whether the ladies noticed the oyster when it started on its travels or not, but he thought, as he leaned back and tried to loosen up his trousers so that it would burry down towards his shoes, that they winked at each other, though they might have been winking at something else. The oyster seeming at something else. The oyster seemed to move very quickly until it got out of reach, and then it got to going very slowly, though it remained cold to the last. He said he had done many things that required nerve, but that he had never perspired so much and felt so small as he did at that banquet, between those two girls, when the raw oyster went down inside his waistcoat, and he hailed the arrivel of that oyster into the heel of his stocking with more delight than any other event of his life. "Yes, madam," said he, as the lady was going away, rather indignant at the course the conversation had taken, "a raw oysthe conversation had taken, "a raw oyster will go further than a stwed one, but the last half of the distance it goes awful slow, unless a fellow can stand up and shake his trouser's leg." And the deacon took the only umbrella in the rack, which was not his own, and told one of the younger sisters he would see her home, as he was going that way, when the old rascal lived on the other side of town, and she knew it. AUGUSTA Chonicle and Constitutionalist SUBSCRIBE FOR IT.

THE Chronicle and Constitutionalist is the THE Chronicle and Constitutionalist is the oldest newspapers in the South, and perhaps the oldest in the United States, having been established in 1785. While thoroughly Democratic in principle, it is liberal, progressive and tolerant. The Chronicle contains the latest news from all parts of the world, and is recognized as a first class newspaper.

As an advertising medium, it covers the country in Georgia and South Carolina tributary to Augusta.

We endeavor to exclude sensationalism. We publish no articles of an immoral character.

Ayer's FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS

Ir is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable. The Vigon cleanses the scalp, sures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible. As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The Vigon is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.
